Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Psychological Interpretation of the Gospel In my interpretation of the Book of Genesis I have stated that each historical personage represented a fourfold meaning, that is, Historical, Geographical, and Psychological, involving Spiritual. Viewing the psychological aspect of the Gospel we must not be unmindful of these relational phenomena of minds history. As given in the four Gospels, the spiritual takes precedence, and unless we be aware the picturesqueness of the divine revelation obscures its psychological meaning. St. Matthew gives the historical as a clothing of the latter. He begins his record by the genealogy of the Jews: The book of the generations of Jesus Christ, son of David, son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren. Now in my treatise of Genesis I have enunciated that the character Abraham involved the expression of mans fourfold evolution with especial reference to the key to Intellectual Evolution. Therefore, in its psychological meaning the word Abraham meant prophetic vision, or focused energy begotten of religious habit controlling mind through many generations. Moreover that Abraham was an individual, a mind of a higher type in mental energy, evolved by psychological stimulus. Therefore, in the history of Jesus Christ St. Matthew expresses the truth scientifically and psychologically when we realise his idea that the son of David the son of Abraham involved the intense and persistent psychological stimulus of idea from Abraham to David and through fifty-six generations. The psychological Individual of so sustained, persistent and intense stimulus would be of a type phenomenal, a type we express in the word spiritual. St. Matthew affirms that the Virgin Mary was...
